"22. International Veterinary Medicine Scientific Research Congress will be held between 15-17 April 2020 at Istanbul University - Cerrahpaşa Veterinary Faculty.

The congress, which has been held regularly every year since 1999 and has become traditional, aims to bring together national and international veterinary faculty students and lecturers and veterinarians in a scientific discussion platform.

Among our objectives;

- Encouraging university students for academic studies,
- To contribute to the careers and the sector with the projects prepared,
- Establishing and strengthening the communication between students in national and international veterinary faculties,
- Establishing new bridges between business and students,
- To attract the interest of the business world to the prepared projects,
- To contribute to the personal development of students,
- Providing national and international information transfer and sharing occupies an important place.

In the congress, opportunities will be provided to encourage scientific thinking in all participants, especially veterinary faculty students, to ensure more participation in scientific research, and to present the studies prepared with a scientific understanding to the participants and colleagues.

Also, the infrastructure for social environments will be established in order for future veterinary candidates to know each other and improve themselves.
